124 Soldiers Reported Massacred On Remote Island in Philippines How York Times Service

MANILA - At least 124 soldiers were massacred Thursday oo a small island in the Sulu Archipelago, Defense-Minister Juan

Ponce Enrile said Tuesday. The minister said that he suspected that the killers, whom he qualified only as "armed men," might have been "remnants" of the Moro National Liberation Front, a Moslem separatist movement in the southern Philippines.

The massacre took place on the mountainous island of Pata, south of Jolo, the main island of the archipelago. Although Mr. Enrile said that the armed men may have been smugglers, an announcement by the southern military command called them Moslers rebels.

As described by the defense minister, elements of an infantry battalion had completed "police actions" on the island and were about to embark for reassignment when their commander and some of his staff officers were surrounded by armed men. The officers were ordered to instruct their troops to innload their weapons. The troops complied and were moved down by a cross fire.

Administration officials had said Monday night that a review of the complex agreement found no legal obstacles that would prompt Mr. Reagan to renege on it.

"The administration has made a decision, I think a very wise one, to do all of those steps necessary to implement the agreements reached by the Carter administration," Sen. Percy told reporters.

Reagan Reportedly to Propose Less Tax Aid for High Incomes

By Steven Rattner New York Times Service WASHINGTON - The Reagan administration has decided to give high-income Americans - individuals with taxable income above $42,500 and families above $60,000 — only part of the tax cut being proposed for most taxpay-ers, according to administration and congressional sources. As a result, Rep. Jack F. Kemp, R-N.Y., said Monday he would pursue his own tax cut plan. Rep. Kemp. who has been a staunch supporter of the Reagan tax reduction efforts, is an architect of the three-year tax reduction plan known as Kemp-Roth.

"I no longer am bound," Rep Kemp said in a telephone interview. "Obviously I support the president but I will pursue my own

White House Press Secretary James S. Brady said Monday that Mr. Reagan's 20-minute address would emphasize that "it's not going to be business as usual."

> The miners' leaders requested an urgent meeting with the govern-ment this week to demand more subsidies for the industry and cuts in imports of cheaper coal.

Mrs. Thatcher's government has been attacked by the Labor Party opposition and by some of its own supporters for misjudging the situation. The conservative Daily Mail accused the government in an editorial Tuesday of blundering into a crisis by mistaking the miners' mood and their likely reaction to the state-run coal board's pluns to

Students, Regime In Accord In Poland

From Agency Dispatches
WARSAW — The government agreed Tuesday to recognize an in-dependent students' union, settling the main issue of a spreading series of campus strikes.

At the same time, the East German news agency ADN reported that Polish Communist Party chief Stanislaw Kania made a surprise visit to East Berlin, his second to a neighboring Communist-bloc capital in three days to apparently ex-plain the government shake-up in Warsaw last week.

The government's agreement to recognize the student union came during a 312-hour meeting between Deputy Premier Mieczysław Rakowski, head of the regime's new commission on labor relations, and delegation of four studeot lead-

Higher Education Mioister Jaousz Gorski, who joined the ses-sion part way through, said "the students accepted our conditions" to acknowledge the paramount authority of the Communist Party in the union charter and to accept rules requiring a majority vote of members for strikes.

"Today we will probably register the students' union," he said. "The signing of the agreement will be tomorrow [Wednesday]."

Strike Began at Lodz

A student strike that began at Lodz Jan. 21 spread to 20 other institutions of higher learning and student leaders threatened to call more schools out until the union was recognized.

A spokesman at student headquarters in Lodz confirmed Tues-day's agreement hut said he did not have any details on the conditions. "There has been a great tumble [confusion] here since we heard from Warsaw," he said.

The students had already won concessions dropping mandatory courses and an easing of foreign travel rules in talks leading to the agreement. In turn, they dropped demands for shorter compulsory military service.

The agreement resolved the last major remaining issue marring an atmosphere of detente between the government and activist groups that has come about since Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski was confirmed as premier six days ago.

As part of the pact, Mr. Janusz said the students would accept a stimulation in the union's statutes that strikes could only be called after 50 percent of affected students had voted in favor and that they would also include an annex to their statute upholding the Polish

The end of the student strikes and the prospect of a settlement nearing with protesting farmers provided Poland with the more stable picture it needs to present to its Communist-bloc allies. The need for social and political

Czechoslovakia and East Germany, who have thrown what Polish officials describe as a cordon santtaire around Poland, drastically restricting travel and even banning Polish newspapers, have been in the front line of Eastern-bloc attacks on the emergence of a free trade union movement.

U.S. Supports French On Europe Security

Allies Hail Move at Madrid Talks As Showing Spirit of Negotiation

By James Markham New York Times Service

MADRID - In an important step toward improving relations with its Western European allies, the Reagan administration has firmly endorsed a French proposal for monitoring military move-ments by the Warsaw Pact and the North Atlantic Treaty Organiza-

The move, disclosed Monday at the 35-nation Madrid conference on East-West Cooperation, was hailed by Western European nations as a signal that the new U.S. administration is willing to negotiare on security questions and to permit its allies to assume the lead on a key issue like disarmament.

This puts aside the comments of all those, whether through lack of knowledge or evil intention. who attribute to the United States administration an insufficient will-ingness to negotiate," said Hans-Dietrich Genscher, the West German foreign minister. Since President Valery Giscard d'Estaing first unveiled his proposal for a European disarmament conference in 1978. Western European states have gradually lens it support, in part to allow Paris an opportunity to re-enter East-West negotiations, which had been boycotted by Gaullist France. But the Carter administration regarded the

Reagan Set On Tax Cut

(Continued from Page 1) agreement or understanding," said one official who cited "an unfortunate break in communication with Jack Kemp. The official also noted that "there still is a substantial tax break" for upper income

At question is a provision known as the "maximum tax," which limits taxes on wages and salaries to a 50 percent rate. The administration would retain that rate, which now applies to families' taxable income above $60,000 and individuals' taxable income above $42,500.

In any event, such high-income taxpayers would pay less tax than they do now on the portion of their income below the maximum tax Rep. Kemp argued that the 10 percent reductions for three years should be applied to the maximum rate, reducing it to 36.5 percent.

"My goal all along was to get the top rate down to 35 or 40 percent," Rep. Kemp said. "I want to keep pushing the frontiers out a little further than they are."

The administration decision raises questions about some of the justifications being used by see the drafting of a final docu-Reagan aides to defend the massive tax cut. High Income

However, in the case of single Americans with taxable income of $108,300 and above and of families above $215,400, the administration version would provide no cut at all in rates on salaries and wages. A single American with a taxable income as low as $55,300 would find his top tax rate cut only from 50 percent to 46 percent, after all three years of the tax plan.

Although Americans whose top tax rate is now limited to 50 percent would not receive the full reduction in those rates, they would find their total tax bills substantially lower. The full Kemp-Roth program would still reduce the top tax rate on investment income from 70 percent to 51 percent.

While Kemp-Roth is usually described as a 30-percent reduction in tax rates, in actuality, the plan would reduce tax rates by 27 percent. This is because the 10 percent cuts in rates in the second and third years are taken from a smaller base.

In addition to Kemp-Roth, Mr. Reagan plans to propose tax relief for business which will consist of faster and simpler writeoffs of new investment in machinery and ouildings.

Congressional sources said Monday that the business plan would be substantially more generous than had been expected and would consist of a modified version of a program known as "10-5-3." The administration would allow equipment to be written off on tax returns in three, five or, in a few instances, 10 years. Buildings could be deducted for tax purposes in 15 or 18 years, although some could be written off in 10 years.

At present, business investments are divided into 130 separate categeries and must be deducted on income taxes over substantially long-

"Our first tax package is going to be aimed at stimulating the economy, both for individuals and for business and industry." Mr. Reagan said last week, "but there will be a follow up that will come as we begin to make gains and as we solidify and know that it's pro-gressing toward that end."

Document Revised

In December, the French delegation to the Madrid conference skillfully recrafted the document, putting primary emphasis on the need to strengthen so-called "conmilitary blocs and relegating actual disarmament to a remote second

In its new form, the proposal rallied the support of all NATO states except the United States. One of its features is that it would be a state of military that it is not a state of make prior notification of military maneuvers mandatory from the Atlantic to the Urals; the Helsinki accords of 1975, under review here, call for voluntary notification in a zone that reaches only 250 kilometers into the Soviet Union.

By embracing the French proposition for a post-Madrid confer-ence on confidence-building measures, the U.S. delegation helped preserve a spirit of unity among Western states that has been one of the striking features of the trou-bled gathering here since it opened

The U.S. decision, which was announced by Ambassador Max M. Kampelman after talks in Washington with Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig jr., also put the Soviet Union on the spot. Moscow has been ardently pushing its own proposal for a disarmameni conference in Warsaw, which Western states bave dismissed as a propaganda forum rendered meaningless by the occupation of Af-ghanistan.

'Disequilibrium'

But, with the West presenting a solid from around the French proposal, the Soviet Union will not be able to appear as the sole champion of detente and disarmament at the Madrid talks. Leonid llychev, a deputy foreign minister and the chief Soviet delegate here, has strongly rejected the French insistence on expanding the zone for confidence-building to the Urals.

Last month, Mr. Ilychev said that such an expansion "would create a disequilibrium, because the agreement would cover all of the territory of Europe, but it would exempt the United States and Canada."

The categoric Soviet refusal to consider amplifying the confi-dence-building zone, which NATO countries insist is a precondition for any post-Madrid talks, has led many diplomats to believe that the conference here is heading for an impasse soon.

Various committees have begun the phase of the talks that should

The conference has a target date of March 5 for winding up, but most diplomats seem to expect haggling over the final language to carry the gathering beyond that date. It is widely believed that the Soviet Union will bold back agreement to convene another conference to review the Helsinki accords in an attempt to force neutral states to accept its idea for a disarmament conference in Warsaw.

said that the "government lament-ed" the incident but defended the police actions.

A police spokesman said that the officials resigned because of "hostile" public reaction against the police.

There were unconfirmed reports that 200 other high police officials in other Spanish cities had resigned.

The resignation followed three days of public protest in the northern Basque region that culminated in a general strike there Monday. and after the inprisonment earlier Tuesday of five Madrid police in-spectors pending an investigation into allegations of torture.

2 Rounds of Voting Seen

The resignations put new pressure on the caretaker government of Premier Adolfo Suarez three days before Parliament was to hold a confirmation vote on Mr. Suarez' designated successor, Dep-tity Premier Leopoldo Calvo Party lineups indicated that Mr. Calvo Sotelo might be forced into a second round of voting to secure confirmation because of the torture allegations.

Mr. Suarez was not in the lower house of Parliament as Mr. Roson announced the resignations.

Those resigning included Jose Manuel Blanco, director-general of the national police, who had held the post for nine months, and Manuel Ballesteros, head of police intelligence. The police squad under Mr. Ballesteros' command had held suspected terrorist Jose Arre-gui Izaguirre. 30, incommunicado during nine days of questioning.

Police arrested Mr. Arregui and another suspected member of the Basque separatist organization ETA, which was blamed for 95 po-lineal killings last year, on Feb. 4 in Madrid. He died in police custody Feb. 13. An autopsy report listed the cause of death as pronchial pneumonia but saio Mr. Arregui had body bruises from "physical violence" and the soles of his feet were burned.

The interior minister told Parliament that the prisoner received the bruises while resisting arrest. He criticized police doctors for failing to report the burns on Mr. Arre-gui's feet but did not explain what caused the burns.

Leftists Assail Government

Mr. Roson disclosed the police resignations after leftist Parliament members assailed the govern-

Communist Party leader Santiago Carrillo said the interior minister lacken "the necessary force to put order in police."

Socialist Gregorio Peces Barba charged "the death of Arregui came about because the government infringed all guarantees against torture in this country." The Basque country was tense that time to establish an account in the Bank of England that would receive over the next six months $1 billion in now-frozen Iranian deposits held in domestic branches of U.S. banks.

Iran Pact Supported

The hostage agreement was negotiated, with the help of Algerian intermediaries, in the waning days of the Carter administration Among other things, it bars the former hostages and their families from suing Iran over their captiv-ity and blocks several hundred legal proceedings by American busi-nesses seeking about S3 billion from the Iranian government.

It calls for the transfer of bilhons of dollars in frozen Iranian assets to special bank accounts, with the money to be beld pending settlement of U.S. companies claims against Iran by a special international commission. Last week in Dallas, U.S. District Judge Robert Porter ruled that Mr. Carter's action in unfreezing the Iranian assets was an "unwarranted intrusion" into the judicial branch of government. The judge, ruling in a suit brought by Yexas millionaire H. Ross Perot's computer company, held up the transfer of $20 million to

In a different suit in New Jersey, a federal judge on Feb. 2 barred the transfer of $500,000 to Iran. The pact also has been challenged in federal court in Boston.

In addition, about a dozen former bostages — including some who were held for briefer periods ment and filed lawsuits seeking damages ranging from $120,000 to $30 million from Iran.

As part of the agreement, the United States has transferred $7.9 billion in previously frozen Iranian assets to an escrow account in the Bank of England. Of that, $2.9 billion went to Iran immediately and $5.1 billion was set aside to pay off bank loans to Iran, Iran is eventually supposed to get an additional $2.2 billion worth of deposits in U.S. banks.

The agreement also calls for freezing the assets found in the United States of the late shah and his family.

The 52 hostages had been held captive since Nov. 4, 1979, when Islamic militants overran the U.S. Embassy in Tehran. The Americans were set free on Jan. 20.

U.S., Russia Tangle at UN Over Vienna Job

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. -To ensure an independent interna-tional civil service, governments here are not supposed to stake out claims for jobs. But the Soviet Union and the United States are fighting over the post of executive secretary to a Vienna conference promoting peaceful uses of outer space that is due to be held next

The members agreed more than a year ago that the key task should go to an experienced employee, the head of the United Nations' Outer Space Division. The irouble is that the post is vacant.

The ranking official is Marvin Robinson, an American with 18 years in the division. His superior is a Russian, Under Secretary-General Mikhail D. Sytenko, and he will not confirm Mr. Robinson as a division chief. Mr. Sytenko has told Mr. Robinson bluntly that he has the qualifications for the post — except for his nationality.

Practical Solution

A panel that investigates allega-tions of discrimination has found in favor of Mr. Robinson, but Mr. Sytenko has ignored the finding.

Last week, the UN's personnel chief. Assistant Secretary-General James O.C. Jonah of Sierra Leone, stepped in. Mr. Jonah makes speeches about the sanctity of UN jobs and acts in a practical fashion. He said that Mr. Robinson should become division chief and the post in Vienna go to a newly hired Czechoslovak lawyer.

Mr. Robinson would get the New York job; a Third-World subordinate would serve at the conference. maneuvered itself into an interesting contradiction over dealing with the Soviet Union. On the one hand, the president says the Communists are out to take over the world and an agreement made with them is not worth the paper it's written on. On the other hand, the secretary of state says that the Russians must agree to a code of international conduct before the United States will negotiate with them, but if they do agree, the United States will negotiate.

So, you may ask, what's new in this? When has the United States not wanted to draw the Soviet Union into accepting some rules of the international game — linkage? When has the United States not feared that, even if rules could be drawn, they would not mean much? When has the United States not felt that, even if rules cannot be drawn, there may still be some advantage in making agreements? When has the United States not hoped to use the prospect of agreements as bait to induce the Russians to accept rules? When has the United States not wondered if agreements were of real value?

These are the familiar sighs of the postwar era. They define the ambiguities that lie, unavoidably, at the heart of Soviet-U.S. relations. No way has been found to get along with the Soviet Union, and no way without.

In fact, the Reagan administration is approaching this dilemma in its own style. It is not accepting it as a given, as something to he worked with and around. It is speaking, at least in this early period, as though fundamental changes in the nature of the relationsnip can be made. What officials evidently have in mind is to muster U.S. power in all its aspects to impress upon the Kremlin that it must act with greater restraint. What aspects? One is to demonstrate a capacity to buy and build more weapons. Another is to show that the United States can use force

The Reagan administration has when and where it wants. A third is to support local elements resisting Soviet and Soviet-supported power. A fourth is to show that the United States can get along without agreements, and without rules, too.

Aside from its own self-confidence, which is considerable, this administration appears to have two rationales for its hard, bardnosed, hard-to-get approach. It believes that it is tougher, more skillful, more committed and armed with a stronger political mandate than previous administrations to carry this off. It also believes that the Soviet Union bas chronic systemic weaknesses, in its economy, ethnic makeup, ideology and alliance struc-ture, which a calculated U.S. policy can ex-

Ohviously, this design is built on a common Republican critique, and not only a Republican critique, of the deficiencies widely perceived in Jimmy Carter's policy. Yet if it bas promise, it also hears risks. The Reagan design assumes a world of clear edges and sharp hues. It is premised on a particular hopeful model of Soviet behavior, one holding that the Soviet Union, rather than rising to the challenge, will bend to it. It is so far beavy on stick, short on carrot - carrot in the sense of the benefits of specific agreements and of holding open a place for a Soviet world role. It presumes the United States will be quite successful in dealing with its allies and in man aging conflict and change in the Third World. It presumes, too, that the Reagan domestic economic plan will work

The administration is entitled to its own design on the Kremlin. The rest of us are entitled to be assured that the administration is proceeding with its eyes open. Some part of that assurance can be given in words, but much of it can be given only by actions over a period of time. It has not been provided

In leftist Nicaragua, the police recently seized the files of the local Human Rights Commission, apparently because its chairman said that the Sandinistas were using "methods of torture and repression very similar to those prevailing during the Somoza dictatorship." On repression, at least, be was surely right.

Even worse has been the crackdown on the Human Rights Commission in El Salvador, whose reports on violence by right-wing forces have embarrassed the ruling junta. Victor Medrano, one of its officers, was reportedly abducted by armed men in civilian clothes a month ago. He bas disappeared. According to Amnesty International, two other commission members were killed last year — a press secretary was found dead in a shallow grave and the group's administrator was fatally shot while driving in the capital.

These incidents attest again to the courage

Whatever a regime's political color, it takes and effectiveness of human rights monitors. Before his disappearance, Mr. Medrano had criticized the regime in a television documentary. He was well aware of the risks. Violence in El Salvador from all sides resulted in 10,000 killings last year. The government is clearly annoyed by the commission's effort to document its complicity in this maybem.

In Nicaragua and El Salvador, as in the Soviet Union and wherever repression flourisbes, the charge against such monitors is the same: They are "unpatriotic." Yet without the work of these commissions, the world would know far less about political realities. As the Sandinistas well know, documented commission reports on the abuses of the Somoza era played a crucial role in winning foreign support for their revolution. The region's governments have learned not to underestimate the force of the human rights cause. How ironic that the professed realists of the Reagan administration refuse to recog-

International Opinion

U.S. Economic Policy

President Reagan's economic program is in reality a political program, and this means that its problems are also political ones. Much depends on whether it can be got through Congress. It will help to have a Republican majority in the Senate and to know that opinion polls show the nation is solidly in support. The Reagan administration has gone to work with so much determination that it looks as though the age of stop-go has been replaced by steady policies for some time to come. However, if one accepts the arguments of the administration's critics, that determination may be put to a pretty severe test.

February 18, 1906 WASHINGTON - If the bride on whom the sun shines is to he happy, then happy will be the lot of the president's daughter. A finer day for the wedding of Miss Alice Roosevelt and Mr. Nicholas Longworth could not be imagined. The ceremony took place at noon before the most representative and notable company ever seen at an American wedding. Although Mr. Roosevelt endeavored to keep up the fiction that the weedding was not an official event, the fact that the invitations were issued in the name of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt and that the heads of all the embassies were invited, together with members of the Supreme Court, made the occasion far from a "purely family affair."

treasures, Rembrandt's painting, "Lesson in Anatomy by Dr. Deyman," was damaged almost irreparably in the museum here this afternoon by a man who is believed to have lost his senses. The famous painting now bears five slashes from a sharp knife and it is not yet certain whether the canvas can be repaired to leave no traces of the act. The worst cut is nearly a foot long, and goes across the cadaver on which the doctor is operating. The author of the outrage appears to he a Dutchman. He was seen standing before the painting for about 20 minutes, when he suddenly pulled a large pointed knife from his pocket and attacked the masterpiece savagely.

The shipment of six belicopters and thousands of M-16 rifles to El Salvador indicates that once again as in the Kennedy administration. once again, as in the Kennedy administration, counterinsurgency will become the watchword for dealing with subversion and vio-lence in client states. But before Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. and his colleagues start beadlong down this road, they ought to examine the lessons of the past and what the concept is all about. Otherwise we risk not only a dangerous poblical backlash from some propertyl democratic from some powerful democratic neighbors to the South but irreparable damage to the U.S. image in the eyes of the civilized world.

Not Green Berets

A much misunderstood and maligned docurine, counterinsurgency is neither a synonym for "Green Beret" bush warfare nor a euphemism for repression. As set down in the original Overseas In-ternal Defense Policy document approved by President Kennedy, and later selectively applied in more than 30 countries during the 1960s and 1970s, it represents a cluster of interrelated assistance programs aimed at protecting the development process during its vulnerable stages from the forces of political violence, whether from the right or the left. The principal components follow:

 Military assistance: light equipment for local forces (e.g., jeeps, rifles, walkie-talkies, helicopters) coupled with tactical training by U.S. military teams.

Equally, insurance and the second secon Equally important are military "civic action" programs for the countryside — fanning out engi-neering and work units to help with irrigation and samitation projects, to build roads and bridges and even to begin literacy and vocarional skill programs in villages.

• Public safety assistance: equipping civil police forces with vehicles, radio communication systems and crime laboratory facilities, coupled with training in crime detection, record-keeping and po-lice administration — the goal being to professionalize local police for effective and humane law enforcement.

• Mobile development units: funding and training of teams of teachers, sanitation specialists, medical units and technicians to improve living conditions in rural

 Emergency agricultural and economic assistance: funding and supervision of food, crop and disasier relief for refugees and pover-ty-stricken areas ripe for disaffec-tion and infiltration by guerrilla

Reagan Fiscal Pla Into the Trenche

By David S. Broder

WASHINGTON - Ronald W Reagan bas done a skillful job of holding the initiative on the fiscal policy issue in his first four weeks as president, but now the game gets much tougher. Other kinds of political skills — including these of head to hand compare ing those of hand-to-hand combat — will be required, and the cohesiveness of the new administration will be tested in ways that will show how strong its discipline really is.
In the first phase of the operation, Mr. Reagan has played the outside man effectively, while Budget Director David A. Stockman has done the heavy work on the inside. The combination has been impressive.

During this phase, Mr. Reagan has accomplished one major objective. He has gained legitimacy across the political spectrum for the particular view of economic policy he enunciated in the campaign. It is a view that asserts that a specific combination of tax cuts a specific combination of tax cuts and budget reductions holds the key to reducing inflation and spurring economic growth.

Same Theme

Mr. Reagan began that process in his maugural speech and contin-ued it in his television address on the economy two weeks ago. He has reiterated the same theme in meetings with congressional leaders, governors, mayors and the representatives of key constituency and interest mayors that filled his and interest groups that filled his calendar during his first weeks in the White House.

While participants in those meetings generally say that the president steered the conversation away from substantive debate, the due deference in which they couched their comments after see-ing Mr. Reagan has created an im-pression of general consensus around his broad economic strategy. That is no small accomplish-ment. Despite the sweeping victory Mr. Reagan won last November, Mr. Reagan won last November, after a campaign in which he was quite explicit about his economic views, polls show the public to be fairly skeptical about key principles of Reaganomics. The voters have been telling the pollsters that they would give much higher priority to a balanced hudget than to tax reductions, but Mr. Reagan is promising a balanced hudget in promising a balanced budget in fiscal 1983 at the earliest. By that time, be is proposing to cut every-one's tax rates by 30 percent.

Skeptical Public

The polls also suggest that the public is skeptical that Mr. Reagan will have much more luck than past presidents in reducing infla-tion by the method he is proposing. Nonetheless, his own speeches and meetings have created a sense that it would be wrong to deny him a chance to try.

Whether that predisposition to accommodation — call it a "hon-

The Language Gap

By Flora Lewis

TEW YORK — Talk about restoring U.S. influence in the world has focused on weapons intelligence, hard political and economic bargaining. But it has over-looked one vital tool in understanding and swaying other coun-tries. Effective use of these other resources requires a knowledge of foreign languages, which we have been losing for over a generation. U.S. Rep. Paul Simon. D-lil, surveyed the situation and found it so bad that be has written a book about it called "The Tongue-Tied American: Confronting the Foreign Language Crisis."

By 1976, be says, (and the trend has probably since been continuing downward) fewer than 4 percent of students in U.S. public schools studied more than two years of a foreign language, and fewer than 18 percent left high school with any foreign language study at all.

Expanding Babel Even in specialized fields such as diplomacy and trade, Americans' ability to deal with foreigners in their own tongues lags enor-mously behind the mushrooming growth of countries that are insisting on communicating in their own language. The globe may be get-ting smaller in terms of the time it takes to get around it, but its babel keeps expanding.

Rep. Simon, calling for an energetic federal aid program that probably is not at all the best way to reverse the trend, points out the national handicaps of having so few Americans able to deal with people who don't learn English. The shortage of Persian speakers in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran surely contributed to the lack of U.S. insight as the Iranian revolunon gathered steam. The U.S. shortage of Japanese-speaking rep-resentatives surely inhibits U.S. exis not just a way of doing business. It unlocks the compartments of the world. For a long time, we had an advantage in our ability to see over the walls of national cultures and have a sense of what was going on. As a nation of immigrants, we knew many tongues and many traditions. But the pressure of the melting pot, the urge to create and join a national identity, smelted out these skills. Second and thirdgeneration Americans rejected the voices of "the old country," and even when ethnic sentiment arose again in the 1960s and 1970s, there was not an accompanying revival of interest in other languages. Sadly, by the time we really came to need the knowledge, it was largely gone. Now it will take conscious effort and a renewed sense of mental adventure to equip the United States for the global role it wants to play.

But the effort is well worth while in every sense, including moral and cultural enrichment. Language is the way people think as well as the way they talk, the summation of a point of view. Its use reveals unwitting attitudes. People who use more than one language frequently find themselves having somewhat different patterns of thought and reaction as they shift. Some phrases cannot re-ally be translated, but grasping for an equivalent gives another perception of the world, which en-larges total vision. This is the great value of learning foreign lan-guages; it goes far beyond the con-venience of communication.

lo recent weeks, the question of whether the advent of the Reagan administration will prompt yet another abrupt change in course has preoccupied white and black lead-ers in South Africa, Scattered public statements by the new president and key advisers would seem to point to a policy to which primary concern about racial questions gives way to primary concern about the expansion of Soviet in-

Thus Jenne J. Kirkpatrick, the new U.S. representative at the UN. has been quoted in South African newspaper articles to the effect that racial dictatorship is not as onerous as Marxist dictatorship.

And random statements on southern Africa in the congressional testimony of Alexander M. Haig Jr., the secretary of state, are collected like artifacts discovered on an archaeological dig. What they seem to show is a tendency to see South Africa largely in strategic terms, with emphasis on its impor-tance as a supplier of key minerals to the West.

South African Comment

Whether or not that is the way the Reagan administration will come to view South Africa, it is the way South African leaders would like their country to be seen. Io the first flush of enthusiasm, a commentary on the state radio hailed Ronald Reagan's victory Nov. 4 as the defeat of "pseudo-liberalism, permissiveness, state intervention, appeasement and anti-patriotism." However, South African leaders and the more authoritative sections of the Afrikaans-language press have been markedly more cantious in their statements on what they expect of the new presi-Diplomats from South Africa and neighboring black states who assembled in Geneva last month for an unsuccessful UN conference on South-West Africa (Namibia) seemed convinced that the issues the United States faces in the region are too iotractable and intertwined to allow for a lurch in policy - even if the new administration were ideologically disposed to a lurch — without significant damage to U.S. interests.

Support for this view can be found in the published writings of Chester A. Crocker of the Center for Strategic and International Studies at Georgetown University, who has been selected by Mr. Haig to be assistant secretary of state for Africa, although he has not yet been officially nominated.

He said in congressional testi-mony last June, "It would be foolhardy if American policy-makers operated as though the African states consisted of easily distinguishable 'hostiles' and 'friendlies,' using Marxist rhetoric as the limus test."

In illustration of this thesis, be found a "promising pragmatism" in the Zimbabwean government of Prime Minister Robert Mugabe. although he had argued for U.S. support of the transitional govern-ment headed by Bishop Abel Muzorewa, Mr. Crocker also stressed the importance of "sustaining the

Medicine

Leeches Are Still Used By Doctors in Europe

By Lawrence K. Altman, M.D. International Herald Tribine

MAINZ. West Germany—
The leeches in the drugstore window seemed to belong to a scene from ancient medicine, when doctors applied them to patients to "cure" just about every condition. But here the leeches were in a jar near electronic devices and hotiles of modern miracle drugs.

Next to the leeches were posters showing people applying an ointment containing hirudin, the chemical in leeches that prevents clotting while they suck blood. It was recommended for varicose veins and hemorrboids, among other conditions.

For those who preferred leeches to the ointment, the pharmacist, Jurgen Bayer, sold inch-long hungry leeches at $2 each. Some customers apply them to remove the blood beneath the skin that causes black eves. Others use them in the helief that their health will improve when their body produces a fresh supply of blood.

Baver is a homeopathic practitioner who began selling leeches about 10 years ago after he saw them in a window in a Municb drugstore. He imports many leeches from Hungary, and his sales are highest in the summer. During the winter, it is difficult to get enough from the frozen lakes. Leeches in modern medicine? A jolting thought. In medical school, nothing was taught about leecbes.

Some Still Sold

A few pharmacies still sell leeches in the United States, chiefly to people who once lived in Europe where leeches have seemed to be more popular than in America. lo 1850, about 100 million leeches were sold in France. As late as 1953, Russian doctors used leecbes on Stalin before he died.

In the early 19th century, a leading French physician. Francois J.V. Broussais, believed only active measures could abort disease. His customary therapy was to deprive the patient of his proper food and to apply leeches all over the body.

In the United States, doctors commonly prescribed bleeding, but without leeches. One of the strongest proponents of blood-letting was Dr. Benjamin Rush, a signer of the Declaration of Independence and in 1812 the author of the first treatise oo psychiatry in the United States. Today, doctors still prescribe blood-lettiog, but oo a drastically reduced scale.

Before applying leecbes, physicians traditionally cleansed the shaved the hair. If the leech did not hite readily, they moistened the skin with a few drops of blood, milk or water. And if they wanted to stop the leech before it had a full meal, they sprinkled a pinch of salt over the worm, which then dropped off suddenly.

Made curious hy the display of leeches in Mainz, I asked colleagues elsewhere about their use today. Beyond the use of hirudin hy researchers studying blood clotting, at least one serious new application has been found in recent years for the ancient remedy. In France, doctors in Bordeaux Nancy and Strasbourg use leecbes as an adjunct to microsurgery. For last three years at the Hopital Saint-Andre in Bordeaux, Prof. Jacques Baudet and Dr. Jean-Lou-Bovet bave prescribed leeches for certain plastic surgery patients when blood closs and congestion ieopardize the operation's success.

In some skin transplants in France, several leeches are applied to relieve small amounts of blood congestion, but the practice is impractical when there is too much for the leeches to relieve.

Leecbes are also used to belp save fingers amputated in accidenis. Surgeons, aided by microscopes, can restore blood circulation hy sewing together tiny severed arteries. But when microsurgeons cannot reconnect the del icate veins in the fingertips, blood can accumulate beneath the nail. The pressure can cause elots in the

Yet if blood congestion can be avoided long enough, the body can form new blood vessels that will drain the blood and allow the reimplanted finger to survive.

Before the Bordeaux team used leeches in such cases, the doctors often nicked the fingertip and applied cotton swabs to soak up the blood. But the technique did not work in all cases and transfusions had to be given to compensate for the excessive bleeding that occasionally resulted.

Bovet credits the leech therapy with beloing to save several fingers and contributing to the success of other plastic surgery operations.
That success has spread to the United States, Leeches bave helped save several fingers at Montefiore Hospital in the Bronx, ac-cording to Dr. Jane A. Petro, who said that because of difficulty in finding a supply, ber team recently bad imported 100 leecbes from France, "When the need to use leecbes arises," Petro said, "it's virskio with soap and water and tually a part-saving procedure."

UN Getting Fussier About Gifts From Members

The Associated Press

NITED NATIONS — The United Nations is looking its gift horses in the mouth and telling its 154 members to stop sending works of art. Privately, UN officials rate some past contributions as worthless and "appalling."

"You'll find everything here from the priceless to things I wouldn't give you 50 cents for," commented one official.

The United Nations' smattering of art gems include a Marc Chagall stained-glass panel memorializing Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold and 15 others killed with him in a 1961 African plane crasb; "Christ Cruci-fied" by the French painter Georges Rouault, a gift from Pope Paul VI; a majestic 3,000-year-old burial mantle from Peru, and a third-century mosaic floor from Tunisia.

Brian Urquhart, an undersecretary-general who beads the UN art approval committee, says it was necessary to suspend the gift-giv-ing to keep the modern UN beadquarters from turning into "The Old Curiosity Shop."

"What we need are more works of real art" rather than those with messages "that are likely to go out of date."

A long-awaited work by renowned British sculptor Henry Moore fits Urquhart's bill. Moore's bronze abstract of a reclining figure, promised long before the moratorium on art, will complement a 21-foot high, 51/4-ton bronze by Barbara Hepworth, a fellow Brit-on, that stands in front of the beadquarters

Urquhart says be has a spot all picked out in the garden adjoining the General Assembly wing. He bopes to have the new bronze resting on its plinth by next summer. UN guardians of the arts are less likely to go along so readily with another proposed contribution, a big Soviet painting depicting war and peace in Europe.

According to UN sources, however, Secre-tary-General Kurt Waldheim is already committed to the painting, and the artist has picked out a blank wall in the Indonesian Lounge outside the General Assembly Hall.

Two other unsolicited Soviet contributions caught the United Nations by surprise in 1959. One was a model of the first Sputnik satellite, which was launched in October,

The other was a bronze statue inspired by the Bible. The work's title, "Let Us Bear Swords Into Plowshares," is based on Issiah 2:4. The "socialist realism" style figure of a blacksmith with raised hammer and bent sword has long been called "Mister Mus-

Urquhart likes the Spntnik, but for artistic and not scientific reasons. He finds the model satellite, which is suspended from the ceiling in the public lobby, imaginative in design, rather "like a modern sculpture."

When the 39-story marble-and-glass beadquarters building on New York's East River opened in 1950, there were miles of naked

Some of the blank spaces were filled by contributions from the likes of Nelson Rockefeller, who financed two hright murals with amoeba-like forms by Fernand Leger, which adom the General Assembly Hall, and the Gaggenheim Foundation.

Other early figurative murals, depicting the victory of peace over war, now appear dated. Urquhart calls them "subway art."
"When the member states were allowed to give what they wanted, the borrors began coming in," a Waldheim aide remarked. He expressed particular loathing for a porcelain vase from Hungary painted with pictures of UN headquarters and the Budapest parliament houses. In the past the United Nations has yielded to government pressures and accepted various white elephants among the more than 80 gifts on display here, including several plaster-cast replicas of antiquities.

"It's very, very hard to spit in their eye and tell them to forget it," Urquhart said of do-nor countries. He said if he had his way, he would impose a rule: "Replicas are out."

Feelings are mixed here about one of the more recent and larger contributions — a 32-hy-16-foot tapestry from China that hangs over diplomats as they sip drinks in the North Delegates' Lounge.

The tapestry, presented in 1974, depicts a section of the Great Wall with photographic intensity. To its detractors it resembles a gi-gantic postcard with a green tinge.

Before the tapestry could be accepted, along with a 330-pound ivory carving commemorating the start of the Chengti-Kunning Railway, the United Nations had to remove a green marble tablet inscribed with a Confucius saving. The tablet was a gift of the Nationalist Chinese.

Other gifts have survived violent political

For those who survived the sauces and the prices, Maxim's owners, Louis and Maggy Vandable, had a bonus Monday — a dinner at which they awarded their loyal clients so-called "fidelity gold cards" (well, gold-plated) and memberships in a new Omnibus Club (so-called after the corridor that separates the restaurant's two

All told, 33 lifelong fans showed up Monday night, some white-haired, others a bit deaf, but all in great spirits and still endowed with solid jokes and even more solid appetites. Certainly more solid than their youngers. Seeing how they went through an elaborate lobster and poularde dinner washed down with magnims of champagne and 1957 Chateau Cheval-Blanc made it elear that they were not about to be defeated by nostalgia. They did, bowever, pack it in early.

TENICE — Venice was one of Wagner's favorite cities, and to judge by the sold-out houses for his "Tristan und Isolde" at the Teatro La Fenice bere Wagner isone of the Venetians' favorite composers. But even if he were less popular, the city's opera lovers would bave a number of reasons for cramming their lovely theater, because this is a very good, often

To begin with, the orchestra is in excellent form; it is hard to believe it is the same that played so coarsely for Donizetti's "Maria de Rudenz, the production that opened the season a few weeks ago. Though ensemble is still not perfect, the strings seem to have a new luster, the winds and brass a new precision (and far more attractive tone). No doubt much of the credit should go to the conduc-tor Peter Maag, who has clearly established a good rapport with the musicians and inspired them to surpass themselves. Johanna Meier sang the first Isoldes, but for Sunday's matinee taking a beating in similarly nervous European markets.

Gold prices rose in Europe, reaching $504.25 an ounce in London compared with $490 at Monday's close and $500.50 in Zurich. up from $490.50 the previous day.

One analysts said it was an "inevitable" tochnical reaction to sharp gains by the U.S. currency over the last six trading days rather than an indication of a long-term reversal of the recent trend. Dealers said the decision of some speculators to take profits in advance of President Reagan's address Wednesday hight and a meeting of the West German central bank Thursday had helped push down the dollar.

The dollar was quoted in New York at 2.1765 Deustsche marks, two plennigs below its midday quote and compared with Friday's 2.2187 DM close. Dealers said the extreme volatility of the market, which saw the dollar fall more than 7 pfennigs from Monday's Frankfurt fix of 2.2505 DM, had made many operators feel it was too risky to do business. De Beers Cuts Supply NEW YORK - De Beers Consolidated Mines Ltd., the South African company that controls 85 percent of the world's uncut diamonds, is sharply reducing supplies as prices continue to drop. In the past year, economic slowdowns and surging interest rates have reduced the lure of hard assets and increased the appeal of interests bearing assets. As a result, the price quoted by New York dealers for a D-flawless, one-catat diamond, the top-grade investment stone, has alumped 17 percent in the last three months to about $45,000 from about $54,000. These stones peaked at ahout

New York dealers say De Beers notified them that their February diamond supplies will be cur 60 percent from the January level. Dealers also said De Beers will cut supplies to Antwerp by 50 percent and to Tel Aviv by 80 percent.

'Aren't Recession-Proof

Through its London marketing arm — the Central Selling Organization — De Beers holds 10 "sights" a year. At a sight, dealers are given plain paper boxes of rough stones to examine in private rooms. New York dealers expect a drop-off in attendance at February's sight, which began Monday in London.

"We aren't recession-proof," says a spokesman for De Beers' selling organization. "Diamond sales are affected in times of recession as anyone else is." He says the downtrend of recent months is "rather continued," but he declines to comment on the widespread reports of February supply cuts.

Only the top 1 percent of the world's diamonds qualify as investment stones, which usually are sold unmouoted; the rest are used in jewelry or for industrial purposes.

Although some of the smaller, lower-grade investment stones and certain jewery diamonds have not dropped in price, the general downturn has been reflected in De Beers' revenue. In the second half of 1980, its marketing organization had revenue of $1.16 billion, down 26 percent from $1.57 billion in the first six months. For all of 1980, however, tevenue totaled $2.72 billion, up from $2.6 billion in 1979.

Because of the flagging business, De Beers plans to step up advertising of diamond jewelry. This year, De Beers will spend $20 million on its U.S. advertising campaign, which proclaims that "a diamond is forever." That is up from $14 million in 1980.

U.S. Aims to Cut Export Barriers Diamond Prices Fall,

WASHINGTON - The Reagan administration, moving to speed up a drive to eliminate government obstacles to exports, aims to press for relaxation of the following trade hindrances:

At a White House meeting last Thursday of the Trade Policy Committee, which is headed by Bill Brock, the U.S. trade repre-sentative, it was decided that Com-

BUSINESS/FINANCE

This division of authority worked out in the early strategy session illustrates the way efforts are being made to reduce the al-most inevitable interagency frictions. When the same legislative proposals came up last year, the former trade representative, Reubin Askew, and the former commerce secretary, Philip Klutznick, both sought leading roles and failed to coordinate their efforts.

A Central Clearinghouse

"Mr. Brock is re-establishing the trade office as a central clearing-house for trade issues," said How-ard Weisberg, director of interna-tional trade policy at the U.S. Chamber of Commerce. "Rather than act as an advocate, he is the coordinator,"

Much of the way the trade team functions will depend on the chemistry between Mr. Brock and Mr. Baldrige. From reports so far, the chemistry is good. Both are from the moderate wing of the Repubb-can party. Mr. Brock, a former senator from Tennessee, had been chairman of the Republican National Committee, Mr. Baldrige, a former business executive from Connecticut, had been a supporter of Vice President Bush. "I think the team is shaping up very well," said Alan W. Wolff, a former deputy U.S. trade repre-sentative. "You have to under-stand domestic forces and work with the Congress. Brock qualifies on both counts."

A key Congressional staffer who follows trade issues added:

"Brock has grasped the immedi-ate issues. I think he'll be much clearer in the signals he gives to other countries. There will be more of an America first approach. But I don't think there will be any change in basic liberal trade phi-losophy."

EEC Asks U.S. to Cut Interest-Rate Gap

By John Tagliabue New York Times Service

BONN - European finance BONN — European finance ministers have urged the United States to help reduce the broad gap between U.S. interest rates and those in Europe. They said that the substantially higher U.S. rates were the major reason for the dollar's recent steep climb against European currencies.

Meeting in Brussels, the EEC ministers said Monday they had agreed to ask French Finance Minister Rene Monory to explain their position to U.S. officials later this week at a meeting of the Interna-tional Monetary Fund's interim committee in Washington,

EEC to Monitor Japanese Goods

BRUSSELS — EEC Foreign ministers, expressing serious con-cern about trade relations with Tokyo, Tuesday decided to monitor Japanese car, television tube and machine-tool exports to the EEC.

The step was announced after West Germany, reluctant to back any move that might be construed as protectionism, lifted its earlier reservation, sources said. The monitoring will be done as shipments arrive in the EEC and not, as France wanted, as they leave Japan, the sources said. None of ministers suggested the EEC impose import quotas oo Japanese goods, they added.

to written questions, Rolf Bochme, an official at the ministry, takes the position that it often cannot Iell whether a tax-deductible payment is a bribe because the payment is frequently channeled through an agent or a consultant. Austriao investigators say they have been tracking down payments allegedly made by Siemens tors from Geproma oamed and other contractors working on a 2,100-bed hospital complex under construction in Vienna. The in-quiries followed an Austrian magazine report last spring of heavy cost overruns. The final cost of the hospital may exceed $3.25 billion.

Parallel inquiries have been conducted by a parliamentary committee and the state prosecuting attorney's office. Officials at the prosecutor's office allege that Sicmens obtained its contract for electrical installations at the hospital through payoffs.

Herbert Hofer, the state attorsaid in an interview that Adolph Winter, former director of planning and construction for the hospital, was also the proprietor of two Liechtenstein-based companies called Plantech (for "planning and technical investment") and Geproma (for "general project

Friends uniformly describe him as charming, animated and fun to be around. Of 254 business school graduates who applied to Morgan Stanley, Mr. Antoniu was one of 14 who joined.

Merger Date

In investment banking, being chosen to work at Morgan Stanley is viewed as a plum, but the first year there, as at many other investment banking houses, is very much a grind, with long bours of num-bers to analyze. Friends of Mr. Antoniu said be expressed feelings of frustration that he could not anticipation of sharp price increas-make money faster and be more of es once the mergers were ana star at the firm.

Three years after Mr. Antoniu joined Morgan Stanley, the firm encouraged him to move else-where. He left for Kuhn Loeb, an-other old-line investment banking ouse, which later merged with Lehman Brothers.

Mr. Courtois is the son of a prominent Montreal lawyer who served on the board of the Bank of Nova Scotia and more than a dozen other major Canadian concerns. charges One of the ironies of the case is that so much of the activity should have emanated from Morgan Stanley. The firm is generally regarded as having some of the tightest security measures on Wall Street, a point reaffirmed by government investigators, who praised Morgan for its cooperation. Morgan's merger and acquisition department is physically sepa-rated from the rest of the firm, and it periodically conducts an electronic check on its phones to make sure they are not tapped. Projects carry code names and employees working on them are forbidden to discuss their work in elevators, halls, the company cafeteria or any place other than specific working rooms. Junior employees are not privy to any deals other than those on which they are working. As an officer of the firm, Mr. Courtois had greater access to merger infor-mation than Mr. Antoniu.

THE first piece in "The Collected Stories of Elizabeth Bowen" is about breakfast. Living in a boarding house, Mr. Rossiter confronts every morning the difficulty, the complexity, of getting through breakfast among near-strangers, ambiguous people. The shock of personality in the brilliant morning light is too much for him.

His landlady says "Yon look quite poetic, Mr. Rossiter," and he thinks "I believe they all want to marry me! Is this insight or deliri-um?" As he leaves the bouse, a fugitive from domesticity, he imagines that "all his days and nights were loops curving out from breakfast time, curving back to it

The Pathos of Mediocrity

Rossiter is a typical Elizabeth Bowen character. She writes about people who are trapped in dramas too undramatic to complete themselves, people whose lives lack the impetus to achieve either comedy or tragedy. The late writer was a connoisseur of the obscure, the mediocre. She was one of the few writers who understood, without sociological condescension, the pathos, the gray poetry, of mediocrity. In ber stories, mediocrity is a failed gesture, an absence of necessary grace, an'insufficiency of passion, a discrepan-cy between dream and dreamer. It is a hunger without appetite.

In "Daffodils," a spinster schoolteacher impulsively calls our to three of her students who are passing her window. They are on her mind because she has been correcting their papers on the subject of daffodils. She has daffodils m her room and she tries to make the three girls see them with pristine eyes, to free them from all com-

What she is doing is nothing less than trying to introduce the girls to something as clusive as ontology. Growing hysterical with the intensity of her own perceptions, she harangues the puzzled girls. She offers them tea and buns—a party in honor of the daffodils, as if she were suddenly afraid to be left alone with her solitary apprecia-

Reading this, one wonders what happened to all the people who cared about, who even thought critically or categori-

In "No. 16," a timid, unmarried young woman goes to visit a critic who was the only one to praise her first novel. He is a shabby, middleaged man living with his wife in a condemned bouse in an empty row. He is lying on a couch, suffer-ing from the flu. MOST textbooks on bridge asis always the right bid, but this is not so. A slight underbid is recommended if your partner generally underplays and is about to be declarer. Conversely, a modicum of aggression is acceptable if your partner happens to be one of the best dummy-players.

On the diagramed deal, South's opening bid of one beart was over-called with a pre-emptive jump to three clubs. The accurate bid for North was now three hearts, and one would expect South to pass and struggle bome with nine tricks. But North jumped to four hearts, West led the diamond four to his partner's jack, and South won in his hand and led a heart to the ace. The heart jack was more likely to be a singleton than a selection from Q-J doubleton, so South finessed the eight on the way back.

South already had eight tricks with a trump to come for nine. And when he led a spade toward his king he could not be prevented from making two more tricks. East had to duck; and the king won in the closed hand. Another space was led to the queen and when West led the club ace, he was allowed to win. Then the club king in duning came to life.

Making an overtrick in an optimistic contract that seemed likely to fail was worth all the match points to North-South Notice that West could not have saved the overtrick in the ending by an blocking the queen under the ling. Another spade lead would force East to win and play a club, of which South would discard.

Fence-Sitters

"I think a lot of schools will choose to follow AIAW regulations for the next couple of years just to see what is happening," she said. "They will sit on the fence for a while to see which way in jump.

"But there are many of us who have said we think this will diminish the AIAW. It could mean the demise of the AIAW. That would be unfortunate, because I think we have been a positive influence on the athletic scene. We have offered some alternative options for women's athletics, for nonrevenue sports and for men's athletics that will not be possible if the NCAA is running a monopoly."

Says Christine Grant, women's athletic director at the University of Iowa: "There is no question that the NCAA action will have a profound effect on the future of women's athletics and on the continuation of AIAW." And, she adds. "we do not even have a preliminary assessment as to the damage that has been done.

"I did think this organization had an alternative approach to intercollegiate athletics, and it was one that should have survived. It was one that faculties could have supported, It was financially sound and it was philosophically reasonable. It protected the rights of the student

A field hockey coach. Taylor said she has informed all of her team's opponents for next year that if they are going to recruit players under the NCAA rules, "our con-tracts will be considered null and void," Nevertheless, she said, it is likely that only a small

Ruth Berkey, director of women's championships for the NCAA, says she's totally committed to the NCAA women's programs, which she describes as in the best interests of women's athletics. "AIAW seemed to be building the kind of athletic program that might not suffer from the same mistakes the men have gotten into," he said.

"It offered unique opportunives for women to gain ex-perience in leadership in athletics. But it will be difficult for AlAW to continue in its present shape fur long.

"The NCAA has greater financial resources and greater control of media exposure. If significant numbers of institutions opt to go into the NCAA championships and apply the NCAA rules, it will be very difficult for AlAW to sponsor any championships at all."

animal Heroid Intrinc LONDON - Which would you like first? The good news, the bad or the other?

The good is truly heartwarming to this columnist — the return to international goalscoring of a Brazilian once seemingly empled before his prime

The bad news is, alas, horrendous on two levels: hysteria and death in Greece and the corrupting of young minds in Italy.

The other? Let's get that out of the way as a kickoff. The European half of the 1982 World Cup qualifying rounds awakens from midwinter slumber with a double spot of Cypriot bashing.

Cyprus, having leaked 18 goals in four defeats, visits Brussels Wedenesday, then Groningen, in the Netherlands, Sunday. In the first match, Belgium will demand that strikers Erwin Vandenbergh and Jan Cenlemans treble their two-goal output in Nicosia before Christmas and at least give a flour-ish to their nation's door but definite march toward the finals.

And even Holland, without a World Cup victory so far fand having sacked its manager), now expects that the players who so abjectly failed Jan Zwartkruis will now trash the inexperienced Cypriots. They probably will, but after the seven goals France put into the Cyprus net, and the six from Eire, it will not amount to much,

Yet even that will be sweeter than the sound of silence around Greek stadiums last weekend, Greece was mourning the 19 fans crushed to death during a stampede following the Olym-piakos-AEK Athens match in Piracus - senseless killings that are the harrowing sequel to crowd violence on that island after "games," The implications, the question whether the sport is worth the risk. should dwarf the incongruously-la-beled "Greek tragedy" concerning clubs that field South American players on forged documents.

When it comes to cheating, how ever, Italy is not easily displaced. The ink has yet to dry on the legal cop-out that "cleared" 33 players and officials in the 1980 bribery scandal, a judgment apparently hinged oo the contention that sporting fraud is not a crime.

Today and Tomorrow

Apart from the evident stupidity, the depth of this deception has touched the lives not only of Ital-ian school children taught to cheat, but also affects the thinking of youngsters the world over.

Show a child that the game is so important that dishonesty is acceptable and you have tomorrow's chears and liars on your hands. FIFA, and indeed UEFA with its Italian president, must act now to banish for life the men - not the boys - who have admitted to a shocking debasement of children's

Now, at last, the good news, It comes via a simple scoreline from thousands of miles away: Ecuador 0. Brazil 6 (Reinaldo 2, Socrates 2, Corrales O.G., Zico). The first name on that scorecard is the im-

I first saw him at Brazil's 1978 World Cup training camp. A player with a smile on his face, the face of a boy on stocky limbs I was told even then were degenerating toward senility. His back to goal, he positively invited, and certainly received, crude tackles against his electric turns and deceptive flicks. By then, nine operations had cut into his future. Observer

Another New Elite

By Russell Baker

New York Times Service NEW YORK — The latest word from Washington is that the Reagan administration will distinguish between the poor and the truly poor when it starts cutting government services. The truly poor will have nothing to worry about from the budget cutters. They will be treated as the elite of poverty. meaning the gov-ernment benefits will continue to arrive as usual.

Those who are just poor ennugh to be poor but not poor enough to be truly poor, on the other hand, can anucipate hard times at the federal trough.

The fatal flaw becomes obvious if we glance at how the same idea works at the top end of the eco-

There we have long bao a moneyed class divided into two segments. These are the ricb households with fully taxed income ranging from $75,000 to $150,000 — and the truly rich, with delicately taxed incomes ranging from a hnusehold's $75,000 to a corporation's $5 billion

What divides the two moneyed classes is the government's readiness to keep the trough filled for the truly rich, chiefly by means of sweetheart tax-law arrangements, and its insistence that the just plain rich continue to suffer the common tax hurden.

The rich are nobody's fools. They see the elite class - the truly rich - receiving government boons. Before long they quit applying to accountants and tax atinmeys and begin subscribing to "Tax Shelter Digest."

Very quickly they abandon pro-ductive lahor altogether and take up careers at finagling, making jelephone calls and eating deductihle meals, all designed to help them escape the suffering of the unprivileged rich and move into the truly rich elite.

Poor people are no less canny.

poor is not good enough to qualify for government help, they are going to do their best to move down among the poverty elite, the truly poor who get the gravy.

I know of one such downward movement already in progress. It is being undertaken by a 75-year-old widow who is struggling to get rid of her life's savings so she will be-come poor enough to qualify for government health-care funds.

Having always been self-reliant. she was dismayed last year to dis-cover that the federal health insurance she had bought would not provide money to help pay for the operation she had just undergone.

The problem was that having worked until she was 73 and having been frugal she possessed $7,000 in a savings account, which was, moreover, earning 5½ percent She was astonished when the government's man said she would bave to pay her medical hills out of pocket, since she was not poor enough to qualify for payments under the federal health insurance she had bought.

The solution was obvious enough. She ought to squander every last cent and enjoy herself.

If she didn't and if she had to undergo another bout at the hospi tal, her savings would all go for sawbones services and ether, which was not much fun. Whereas if she had to go to the hospital flat hroke, the government would be nbliged to pronounce her truly poor and pay the hill for her.

I did not give her this advice not because I believe that every American should struggle to the hitter end to pay his own way (where would our great corpora-tions be today if that idea caught on?) but because I would have been ashamed to be the one to teach an old lady who still believes in 51/2 percent savings accounts how to become a finagler.

Fortunately, someone truly poor pointed out the obvious to her, and since then she has been working hard to spend her way down into the true poverty elite. Whether she can make it I very much doubt, for her idea of squandering wealth is to spend $2 on canned cat food to brighten the cat's monthly diet.

Most of the poor, I suspect, are more cunning than that about how to satisfy an economy-minded gov-

Walter Cronkite

On the Eve of His Retirement, America's Anchorman

Reflects on the Way It Was

By Jeffrey Robinson

International Heroid Tribune

MONTE CARLO — Nineteen years later, on March 6, when he signs off the CBS Evening News with, "And that's the way it is," that's the way it will be for the final time. Walter Cronkite is hanging up his spurs. It's like 'Washington saying larewell, or DiMaggio giving up center field. What will America do every night withnut "Uncle Walter" to tell them the way it's been.

Walter" to tell them the way it's been.
"No nne's indispensable," he says with that familiar gentle voice and smile. "So much is being made of this, exaggerated be-yond reason. Of course I'm flattered with all the kindness being shown me. But the CBS Evening News will continue."

Here over the weekend to accept an award at the Monte Carln Television Festival, Cronkite is seen nightly by 18½ million Americans as the anchorman of the CBS Evening News. More important for him, he is also the program's managing editor. "When I took over 19 years ago, I insisted on a major role. As a longtime newspaperman I've always thought that editing was where my strength lay, and not on the air. There are many anchormen whn may be a lot better than me, but I'm a darn good managing edi-tor and that's where I have great pride in my

Pros and Cons

At 64, he might be the world's only managing editor-superstar. One commonly cited poll shows that Americans have more trust in him than in some U.S. presidents. He is also certainly one of the most recognized men in the country. "Of course that has both advantages and disadvantages. If you like to do reporting, it can be a considerable disadvantage. Imagine walking into a crowded meeting hall to cover a political candidate during a primary and suddenly you become more of an attraction than the candidate. But then there's no police line you can't get through while other reporters have to stand aside. There's always some friendly policeman who will let you through to see the body, even if you don't particularly want to see the body. Being well known also helps to get people on the phone who might not otherwise be accessible."

Besides anchoring the Evening News, and because he is who he is. Walter Cronkite has also been the mainstay of CBS's coverage of most of the big stories for nearly two decades, "Vietnam and Watergate have been the really major stories, the ones which might have changed the course of American life. And the assassination of President Kennedy

Catalyst ln Meetings

He feels that CBS News was a catalyst for Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's visit to Prime Minister Menachem Begin. "We asked good journalistic questions at the right moment. I asked Sadat, do you have any conditions before going to Jerusalem? He said no. I wanted to pin him to the wall, so I asked how soon he could be ready to go. He said within a week. Then I put the same sort of questions to Begin. Would you accept a meeting with Sadat and how soon? It put them both on record in front of a world audi-

The big stories, however, are not the only measure of how he sees television playing a role in world affairs. "I think television has probably changed around a lot of things in our world. For instance, our perception of war, at least in the United States. Today TV is capable of bringing a war into your living room. With satellites and minicameras, today we would be able to watch the battle of Hue live as it happens. Can you imagine the serious problems that might pose to democra-

And here he seriously suggests that under the high technology circumstances of today, there might be some questions as to whether or not democracy is a suitable political phi-

"I'm not saying that the answer should immediately come down on the side of no. I support democracy. I'm simply saying that there is a question. I think there is a hell of a lot of explaining to be done before we can be sure that democracy can work." Watching soldiers live in combat is only one example. Another might be how to leg-islate for a democracy with inputs from a population when the legislation is highly technical and scientific in nature. One group of scientists says one thing, another group contradicts the first. Congressmen make oecisions based on staff reports prepared by people who might have their own political ax to grind, so even congressmen may not know any more about the problem than the average citizen.

"These sorts of problems have become a reality today. A hundred and fifty years ago you might have only faced one such problem in a lifetime, like where to build a steam plant. It was fairly limited. A hundred years ago there wish have been two like where to ago there might have been two, like where to

Our lives are built by the technological impacts on society, and here we are turning over so many of these decisions to government. I really think one of the great problems of our future will be how in keep democracy alive in a technological

But then across the United States on March 6, there will be a more immediate question to ponder: What will life be like without Walter Cronkite to tell the nation how it really is. The question amuses him.
"Believe me, the CBS Evening News will continue right along." Anyway, he's only leaving that job and will still maintain a long-term contract with CBS. He will be host of a science series called "Universe" and will also do specials like the space shuttle liftoff later this spring.

After il years with United Press and 28 years with CBS, he says he most certainly wants to continue working but at a more leisurely pace.

"Living with deadlines every day for 40 years, you come to know the tyranny of the clock. I've traveled around the world to cover stories and never really had any time to visit any of those places, to get to know those places, because there's always a five o'clock plane to catch. As I get closer to March 6, it's wiin great regret. Of course it's going to have a traumatic effect on me and I won't walk away from it without bleeding."

He even says that lately some people have talked him into believing that it might be an absolutely terrible moment. "I'm not sure that in six months I won't say I made a big mistake, although I don't think that will happen. It's just that after all these years, I'm ured of catching those five o'clock planes."
